Tents

LEVEL C-1: Early Homes | Book 2

written by Elfrieda H. Hiebert

Early tents were made with animal bones and skins.

In winter, people had to stay in one place.

They made tents that would let them stay.

The tents kept away snow and rain.

Early people had to move to find food.
They could not take a cave with them.
They needed homes they could move.
So early people made tents.

Winter tents were made to be strong.

Tents made from trees were not as hard to move.

Tents of animal skins and bones were hard to move.

People began to make tents from tree branches.

Trees were easy to find.

Tents made with tree branches were light and easy to move.
